Background

Rob has 20+ years' experience in executive development, having worked in top business schools and run a corporate university for a major multinational. He has structured long-term leadership development programs for senior executives and advanced managers. In addition to talent management, Rob is an experienced executive coach, having coached over 88 nationalities, lecturer in strategy and change, group facilitator, and corporate education specialist.

Rob leverages his background in both business and academics to develop and coach leaders who can build a culture of engagement and commitment in multi-cultural environments.

For five years he headed one of Asia's leading Corporate Universities, ST University Asia, for the French-Italian Semiconductor Company, STMicroelectronics. In the UK, he was a senior member of faculty at Manchester Business School's Executive Centre where he designed, directed, and taught executive programs for corporate clients and entrepreneurs.

A mechanical engineer by training, Rob was a senior partner and founder of executive development in the UK and managing director of his own successful manufacturing company.
