

WHAT NORM SHOULD I SELECT?

With recent norm updates and efforts to move clients from older norms to newer and more regularly updated norms, we've received questions about what norm is best for a given client, group, or project. The global norm remains our default norm, with many local norms also available for use in single locations. To help answer questions about whether global or local norms are most appropriate, we're providing a decision tree covering the most relevant issues to consider in selecting a norm. However, we realize that a client or project may have unique needs that can affect norm choice. If you have projects with unique needs, please discuss those with Research. Otherwise, we hope this decision tree helps you in selecting the best norms for your current and new clients and their projects.
