Background

Christine is an accomplished consultant and executive coach. Her developmental approaches are carefully targeted to the unique needs of each leader and their organisational context. Christine's focus is on postmodern methods of supporting leaders of today and tomorrow. This facilitates changes in thinking to more complex, systemic, and strategic ways in order to be responsive to the dynamic, ambiguous, and complex internal and external environments. The leader's enhanced self-awareness elevates levels of consciousness, enabling the individual to intentionally choose how to respond in different situations. This moves the individual away from old habitual and learned responses to create and embed greater resourcefulness, agility and flexibility which are required for effective leadership in today's world.

Clients describe Christine as 'courageous, focused, pragmatic, and energetic' and value the support, challenge, and commercial insight she brings to her work. Through the 'thinking partnership' established with the client and the organisational sponsors, synergy and breakthrough are generated which enhance well-being, engagement, impact and performance.

Christine's corporate experience includes senior operations roles with Marks and Spencer and the Storehouse Group, where she successfully developed and led large teams in the delivery of the business strategy. Christine currently has clients based in USA, Asia Pac, Australia, UK, and across Europe.
