Background

Luke is an experienced Industrial/Organizational Psychologist with over 15 years of experience leading talent assessment and development objectives for global organizations across multiple industries. With a focus on leadership development and coaching, Luke strives to help people realize and unlock their potential through interactive data-driven discussion that adapts to each individual's goals, needs, and motivations. Prior to leading his own advisory practice, he spent several years as an internal consultant within a Fortune 100 organization, and then worked within a global advisory firm. He also has extensive training and experience working with family-owned organizations, helping leaders navigate the unique dynamics in that system. Luke serves as an adjunct professor within an MBA program at a local university where he developed the curriculum and delivered instruction for multiple courses. With a passion for education, he recently created a center focused on amplifying the voice of educators and delivering data-driven solutions, advising school administrations on how to better engage and retain their teachers.
